

PANDEMIC (COVID-19) PLAN REVIEW

Does your business have an effective and appropriate Pandemic (COVID-19) plan?

Why conduct a review of your Pandemic Plan?

An independent, qualified auditor will review your plan so you can:

- ensure you are complying with safety legislation;
- assist the Board and Executive team understand if systems are appropriate and in place to manage risks such as infection control and mental health;
- identify opportunities to improve operational activities and performance;
- improve your safety culture.

Reviewing your Pandemic (COVID-19) plan will help to ensure corporate governance processes are in place so you can have:

- Certainty corporate governance processes are in order and working;
- More effective strategic and operational COVID-19 planning;

- Greater confidence in achieving effective infection control with planned and systematic processes in the business;
- Enhanced organisational resilience that reduces the time lost on managing incidents and improves the organisation's potential to exploit opportunities; and
- Greater confidence in making business decisions to manage risks.

What does a Pandemic (COVID-19) Plan review do?

Compliance to safety legislation - determine if workplace practices are meeting legislative requirements and government guidelines.

Management systems (documents and procedures) -

This requires a wider scope and addresses organisational structures, COVID-19 planning activities, responsibilities, implemented processes, review cycles and measurement and evaluation issues.

What a Pandemic (COVID-19) Plan review will tell you:

- If you have effective processes in place to comply with the health and safety legislation and government guidelines including COVIDSafe business plan requirements;
- Whether your business leaders and workers are meeting the standards which the company has set itself within its pandemic plan;
- Critical risks that need immediate attention;
- Critique on COVID-19 prevention measures against best practice appropriate to your industry;
- Contingency measures you require in the event of another outbreak; and
- Opportunities for improvement with recommendations to improve business performance and results.

What you'll get:

- Understanding of the suitability and appropriateness of your formal and documented systems for managing the risks associated with a pandemic;
- Identification of any significant health and safety liabilities associated with activities undertaken to minimise infection risks and promote mental health; and
- A prioritised personalised Pandemic Safety Action Plan.

It's recommended every workplace should conduct regular reviews of their COVID-19 Pandemic plan in line with changing and easing restrictions. Monitoring your processes and reviewing your workplace compliance is the most effective method to identify any uncontrolled critical risks before a costly incident arising.
